This event marks a significant milestone in our ongoing efforts to strengthen our nation's security apparatus and encourage talented individuals like yourselves to join us in shaping the future of Jamaica's public sector landscape.

I want to begin by acknowledging the dedication and hard work of the individuals who already serve in the Ministry of National Security and the broader public service. It is their unwavering dedication that forms the foundation upon which we aim to build a safer, more prosperous Jamaica.

Today, we come together not just to discuss career opportunities but to emphasize the importance of public service.

I would like to take this opportunity to highlight a few key points that I believe are essential for you to consider as you explore the possibilities within the Ministry of National Security and the wider public sector.
